This reluctance, perhaps, partly explains the lower turnout-72 per cent as against 79 per cent in February. All through the threeweek campaign voters talked of that any party had the answers to Britain's problems.

In yesterday's voting, they seemed to be telling Mr. Wilson that they were willing to give him more time but not a resounding mandate out of fear of encouraging Labor party extremists to move too far left. There was general agreement tonight. that the narrow margin strengthened the hands of the party's moderates, those likely to oppose moving toward more nationalization and the withdrawal of Britain from the Common Market.

cast their ballots for the Labor party's opponents.

The results represented a severe shock for the Conservatives, led by Edward Heath, whose political future is now in doubt. They were damaged not only by Labor candidates in important marginal seats in England, but also by the surging Scottish National party, which campaigned for independence for the five million Scots and scored gains at

Asked about his position as party leader, Mr. Heath said only that he would continue "to serve my country and my party to the very best of my ability." But many politicians now expect demands to rise in Tory ranks to depose the former prime minister, who has now lost three of the last four elections.

Support for Wilson The thin margin of victory for Mr. Wilson does not mean that the British, weary enough of campaigns after two this year, will have to face another one soon. While the actual majority is small, Mr. Wilson can count on some members in the smaller parties to provide a larger margin on many crucial votes. Among those who could come to

But the going will not always be easy for Mr. Wilson in the House of Commons, where illness, traffic jams and bad weather often work to keep the most hardy away from important votes. Even Conservative party politicians, however, said they would expect a fairly long life for Mr. Wilson's government, barring a major economic catastrophe.

Mr. Wilson, whose victory made him the first prime minister in this century to win four elections, does not have to call another election until 1979. By then, the nation's economic fortunes are expected to brighten with revenues from the oil finds in the North Sea.

"We could be in the wilderness for a long time now," said one Tory politician tonight.

This view, however, was not endorsed all around. Despite the help from nationalists, Mr. Wilson could find his majority slipping away because of the deaths and losses in hy-elections.

One question tonight was whether Mr. Wilson would have to trim back some of the more extreme party proposals because of the narrow margin. The left wing of the Labor party has been pushing for an extension of nationalization in private indus-

Aid and development officials here can only guess at the rea-sons motivating this surprising

One line of speculation is that President Tombelbaye is sending American grain to the north because he wants to appease the nomads, who are openly disarfected and who have often rebelled against all governments other reason offered is that grain sent so far away can be disposed of without anyone's knowing its ultimate use. A third speculation is that the grain can be used to feed government troops sent north to keep the nomads in check.

There is no need to guess, however, at the reason for the constant backlog of relief food. It is the government failure to break the monopoly of the trucking industry in this landlocked country without railroads.

Throughout the relief operations beginning last year, the donors have carried on a running fight with the truck monopoly. The truck owners have used the monopoly to enforce the highest ton-per-mile rate in the world and to keep the cheaper, faster and larger Nigerian trucks from carrying grain here while Chad-

On this issue Mr. Wilson said his majority would be enough to put through Labor's piedges and suggested there would be no attempt to water them down.

There remains the danger of a party eruption over the issue of the Common Market. Mr. Wilson has pledged to give the British people a chance to vote on whether they want to remain in Europe, sometime within the next year after efforts to change Britain's membership terms.

Several party moderates have said they would resign from the government if the vote went against Europe. No political analyst is prepared to rule out rejection by the voters even if the Labor party urged them to vote "yes" on remaining in the nine-nation community.

"Social Contract"

A more immediate test centers on Mr. Wilson's handling of the economy and the stability of his "social contract" with the unions on curtailing inflationary wage demands. During the campaign, Mr. Wilson stressed that his voluntary agreement with the often provides the contract of the c troublesome unions was the only way to avoid a "wages explosion. —A jury of nine women and three men plus six alternates was chosen today to hear the trial of fiva former officials of Richard Nixon's administration and of his re-election organization on charges of conspiracy, perjury and obstruction of justice in the Watergate cover-up. The prosecution's opening statement is to begin Monday.

The jury consists of eight blacks and four whites; the six alternates are all black women. The panel appeared generally middle-class and middle-aged. The selection came after nine days of laborious questioning, turing which U.S. District Judge John Sirica narrowed down a list of 625 prospective jurors to a final panel of 45. The lawyers then made their peremptory challenges.

The lengthy process was the result of Judge Strica's desire to find a jury unbiased by the two years of intensive news coverage of the Watergate scandals. The jurors and alternates will be taken to their homes to get their belongings for what is expected to be a stay of three to four months at a nearby hotel where they will be sequestered.

By Lon Cannon DETROIT, Oct. 11 (WP).-President Ford last night urged the election of Republican candidates to help him in his fight against inflation

In remarks at a "Salute the President" dinner here, Mr. Ford said that it was "critical" to elect candidates who could help him defeat inflation by "making the hard choices."

"Some political analysts con-tend that the people deliberately vote for the president of one party and then for members of Congress from the other party to be sure that neither domi-nates," Mr. Ford said. "If we are to marshal all of our government's resources against in-flation, that kind of logic simply won't work."

Mr. Ford's appeal was directed to hard-pressed Republicans in this state, where unemployment has consistently run two or more percentage points above the na-tional average. The President said he had recognized this when he released $38.8 million in federal funds aimed at providing public-service jobs for Michigan's nearly 350,000 unemployed workers.

The President, a former Michigan congressman, frankly acknowledged that this unemployment was a factor in the tight gubernatorial race between incumbent Republican Goy, William Milliken and his Democratic opponent, Sander Levin,

The Threshold Test Ban Treaty

Union abandoned all nuclear testing except for tests conducted underground. But to the dismay of those who had hoped that restrictions on testing in the atmosphere and underwater would hobble the arms race, both countries found that underground nuclear tests gave the arms race new impetus. Only last summer, at the third Nixon-Brezhnev summit, did the two countries finally agree to limit underground testing. Americans and Russians signed a treaty to halt big weapons tests—of a force over 150 kilotons—in 1976. Tests for "peaceful purposes" of any size, however, were not covered. The Russlans, who apparently have some large excavations in mind, insisted on leaving the issue open. But the Americans, less sanguine about socalled "peaceful" explosions, wrote into the text a requirement that the two sides make an agreement on such explosions "at the earliest possible time." Talks to honor that requirement began this week in Moscow,

Now, there is a body of expert opinionwhich we find persuasive—which holds that the threshold of 150 kilotons (10 times the size of the Hiroshima bomb) is far too high. Such a threshold would not perform the basic arms-control function of dampening down the arms race Once set, it would be hard to lower and would probably binder efforts to move toward ending all tests in a "comprehensive test ban." Since there are enough senators (37) on record in favor of a comprehensive ban to block ratification on a high-threshold treaty, it is plain that this treaty would have been in political seopardy even if it had made adequate prevision for peaceful explosions.

Mr. Ford's attitude toward the threshold treaty, which his predecessor signed, seems a good deal more restrained-at least as reflected in the comments the other day of Secretary of State Kissinger. Mr. Kissinger raised the possibility that Soviet-American agreement on peaceful blasts might not be

In 1963, the United States and the Soviet forthcoming, He tightened considerably the previously loose condition that such an agreement must be reached before the treaty is submitted for Senate ratification. He conceded that, in tests by advanced nuclear countries, there are "at least some cases" in which military and nonmilitary explosions can be distinguished; the clear implication was that in other cases they cannot.

> The Ford's administration's skepticism does it credit. The new President would be doing less than his duty if he did not discreetly take into account that his predecessor may have signed an inadequate agreement because of his own political distress. And an agreement which would permit tests of any size, if the tester characterized them as "peaceful," is inadequate. The flaw is not so much that either great power would gain a military advantage over the other as that they both would lose standing to persuade third countries not to create or expand nuclear forces of their own. How can the great powers persuade third countries not to go nuclear if they are blithely conducting "peaceful" explosions themselves? The Russians have a special responsibility to address this question since, unlike the Americans. they still profess to see a great potential for "peaceful" nuclear blasts.

On two counts, then—the excessive height of the weapons-testing threshold and the inadequacy of the provision for "peaceful" testing-the draft treaty left over from the Nixon-Brezhnev summit needs to be improved. Controls on weapons testing obviously must be related to the emerging size and shape of the two great powers' strategic forces, as they are further discussed at the SALT talks. The control of "peaceful" tests must be related in turn to broader Soviet-American efforts to limit the proliferation of nuclear arms. We trust that these considerations are on the table at the threshold treaty talks being quietly conducted in Mos-one of the most traumatic moments of their modern history, the so-called Altalena affair of June, 1948. With their republic in its first days challenged on all fronts by combined Arab armies, the new leader, David Ben-Gurion, issued the drastic orders to open fire and destroy a munitions vessel attempting to land a cargo of sorely needed weapons for the Jewish fighters. The premier argued that his young government's authority was at stake, for the supplies on the Altalena were destined not for the national army but for the Irgun, one of the militant factional armies operating outside the government command.

Restraint by Rabin

Some of the same conflicts of principle that so anguished Ben-Gurion as he faced the Altalena seem to be present as his latterday successor. Premier Yitzhak Rabin, confronts militant Israelis attempting to establish new settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan, In an act of exemplary political courage the Rabin government ordered police and army units into action this week, for the second time in as Israelis still speak in muted sadness about many months, to expel these highly motivated but misguided squatters. No more than Ben-Gurion before him could Mr. Rabin tolerate any group of citizens taking national policy into their own hands and operating in matters of war or peace independently of government decisions.

By implanting new Jewish communities in occupied territory-in flat defiance of government policies—the would-be settlers were aiming to deter the government from carrying oot any troop withdrawal that might be negotisted with Jordan. In effect, these young Israelis were attempting to "create facts" which the government would have to acknowledge in drawing the national frontiers just as the Arabs have accused the Israeli government itself of doing over the years.

Mr. Rabin's courageous action just on the eve of Secretary of State Kissinger's arrival gives evidence of the sincerity and determination of the Israeli government to prevent a hard-line minority from disrupting negotiations or precluding the concessions that alone can lead to peace.

Courageous Step for Ford

The decision to pay for these and other [U.S.] spending measures by a tax surcharge on the affluent and on companies is a courageous step for a Republican president at election time. Faced with similar investment problems to our own, Ford has given fresh investment incentives to offset the depressing effect of this higher taxation. In the unwhipped world of American congressional politics, of course, an economic package is not so certain to pass through unscathed as in Britain.

Busing Is Not for Boston

The neighborhood school has a special place in American hopes and affections. Parents who may not have the benefit of much education themselves, whose lives may be circumscribed by low wages and poor social conditions, still see the local school as the one chance their children can have of enjoying a better life than they themselves have had. School is in that sense the gateway to the American dream. It is not surprising, therefore, that busing touches a sensitive nerve. The present trouble in Boston has its local character of course, but it shows that conflict over schooling is not confined to the Southern United States. It can happen anywhere, when people feel their children's rights are in jeopardy: not so long ago it fired the anger of the Jewish community in Brocklyn (and American Jews as a whole are firmly liberal in their racial sympathies) against their black neighbors . . . -From The Times (London).

Wilson's Victory Wilson and the other [Labor] ministers said shockingly little about what they plan to try to do about Britain's crisis. It is only poor comfort that the Conservatives did not want to put out their necks, either, and that some openly accepted large-scale and long-term unemployment. This much is clear, however: On a longer range, Wilson will try to encourage investments and boost production while at the same time guaranteeing certain wage increases through the "social contract". These two things are tied up closely. But some people fear that even that try will be too late. For the time being, the British population has to resign itself to a further decline of the standards of living. For how long it will and can accept that and give the Wilson government a chance to get the British society out of its vicious circle will be the victor's greatest problem.

A THENS,—The solution of the Cyprus crisis is essentially predicated on three things: continuation of a Caramanlis regime in Greece; maintenance of some. kind of cogent government in a confused Turkish political situation; and a successful American diplomatic intervention that produces tangible evidence of a desire for compromise on Turkey's

The two communal leaders in Cyprus itself, Clerides and Denk-tash (representing Greek-speakers and Turkish-speakers) have kept their own bilateral talks going against great odds and achieved some success. And Archbishop Makarios, whose return might touch off trouble, has been persuaded to stay away from the is-land-at least for a while. Thus the key problems are all external to Cyprus itself.

Caramanlis is likely to gain a majority in next month's elec-tions here (the first in a decade), thus reinforcing his position; otherwise he will lead a coalition The Turkish outlook is less clear: but the army there always re-mains the ultimate power force and its leadership must be per-suaded. Strangely, the Greek situation seems more stable this moment, which is a tribute to the leadership of Premier Caramanlis who took over in emergency circumstances from the despotic junta. He led the nation away from a potential military disaster and has now prepared for restoration of parliamentary govern-ment, The likelihood is his firm guidance will avert hysteria over Cyprus.

Although Caramanlis bitterly resents the second (August) Turkish invasion of that island because it was aimed at his policies, he has kept his cool. respect Caramanlis is twisting Washington's arm by threats to undermine the U.S. strategic posttion. The Premier was an avid student of De Gaulle's diplomatic blackmail techniques.

Right now, the word "Cyprus" symbolizes all Greece's problems: inflation, a shaky economy, uneasiness about potential officer plots, the monarchy-versus-republic question, constitutional reform and widespread public demands for a purge of junta leaders and their nastiest tools.

If Cyprus can be pacified, under a new accord acceptable to Athens and Ankara (as well as their Cypriot clients), much of the pressure here will be relieved. total demilitarization of an independent Cyprus removing not but also British bases. Caramanlis has his own team working on economic problems. Solving them, of course, depends on what happens in the whole Western world: but he seems to reckon that with discipline and restraint, the Greek picture can be substantially improved within two or three years.

The gravest internal concern is the twinned problem of restoring discipline in the armed forces while at the same time satisfying popular demands for a purge. The army was carefully politicized during the colonels seven-year rule and most of the officers retired to make way for junts ap-pointees are too old or no longer qualified for commands.

Prudent Attack

The new government has prudently attacked the question piecemeal removing, retiring or sequestrating key military opponents without risking the flareup of a sizeable revolt. Many junts-appointees who violently opposed King Constantine's return now seem to favor it hop-ing he might save them from a purge. This is ally; if the king is voted back by referendum (which is improbable) he will first be deprived of any real power.

My own guess, when regarding the clouded Greek looking-glass, is that Caramanlis will come back even stronger, that a republic will be established with strong presidential authority, that he will be elected to that office, and that there will be a limited purge of principal junta officials, a purge conducted under regular legal procedures at a time when public passions have subsided.

And Cyprus? To accomplish all the above a stable and equable formula must be found to pacify that unhappy island. Whether we or the Greeks or the Turks or the Cypriots like it or not, the buck is quietly being passed to

A White House Need For Scientific Advice

By James Reston

was a time when the President of the United States needed the lieip of the best objective. scientific minds to help him grapple with the problems of food, fuel, transportation, housing and many other things, it is now; but he is a little short-

Early in 1973, President Richard Nixon abolished the post of presidential science advisor at the White House, and disbanded the government's office of science and technology. It was decided then that men like James Killian and Jerry Wiesner of the Massa-chusetts Institute of Technology, Who had helped guide the country through the mysteries of nuclear energy and space, among many other things, were no longer essential on the White House

- Roy L. Ash, director of the Office of Management and Budget, explained the reasons. During the Eisenhower administra-tion, he said, when the Russians pushed ahead into space with their Sputnik, "There was a need to bring science right to the top of the White House."

But after that, he added, science and scientific points of view were represented throughout the government, so "There isn't a need to bring the scientific point of view directly into the presi-dent's office. It's there every

Disliked Advice

Well, maybe so. There is, however, another view that Nixon didn't like the advice he was getting from the scientists about some of his programs, like the development of the supersonic planes, and the dangers of modern technology on the environ-ment of the human race. And there was another conflict. Nixon sensed, quite accurately, that his official scientists were not very enthusiastic about his chances of winning the Vietnam war. They were not part of "the Nixon team." but had become sort of a "special interest" group or scientific lobby within the White House family, with strong political views hostile to his own.

Maybe he was right about this and maybe he was wrong, but the fact is that he wiped them out, and transferred the responsibility for scientific advice to the director of the National Science Foundation, H. Guyford Stever, an able and talented man, who is not at the center of policymaking at a time when science is central to the problem of the nation's and the world's problems. Roy Ash is probably right that "science and scientific points of view are now represented throughout the government," but he is moblems and their suggestions on creasing the food and the fuel

WASHINGTON-If ever there House "every day" or even on time to influence President Ford's decisions.

The truth is, as Roy Ash indicated, that the federal government has a remarkable reservoir of scientific knowledge in Washington, scattered through the departments and agencies; on atomic and solar energy, on increasing the production of food by seeding and desalting the waters of the world, on geologic surveys of new sources of petroleum-one of which is now coming to the fore in Mexico. But all of this information is dispersed in the departments of the government and in the universities and laboratories of America. It is not brought together, with all its potentialities for the future, and put before the President as a vision of the possible and the basis of his policies, which is too bad, because we now have a President who is listening.

It is fortunate, and accidental, that Nelson Rockefeller, Ford's nominee for vice-president, has spent the last few months presiding over a study of the "critical choices" before America-many of them precisely on this question about what science can con-tribute to the solution of our national and world problems. One of the studies in the Rockefeller analysis, for example, has to do with the role of scientific research and development on the world's economic problems. It indicates that a bold investment of $40 billion in fertilizer plants could produce within a few years enough additional food to maintain many millions of George Woods, former head of the world's increasing population. the World Bank, is working on a plan to bring the Arabs—the new capitalists of the world—the UN, and the banking and technolog-ical skills of the Western world together to build and distribute this new fertilizer canacity.

New and Cheaper

Likewise, Rockefeller money and other foundation money is going to exploit new and cheaper means of producing essential raw ma-terials to manufacture aluminum, to find food in the seas, to restore the ancient granaries of the Middle East, and to find new and cheaper engines of transporta-

For the moment, the pessimism and shortages of the world are dominating the possibilities and dampening the natural optimism of America, and this is the frustration of the scientists in Washington, in the universities, and in the laboratories. They are dispersed and many of them feel abandoned. They are a great natural resource of Amerobably wrong in thinking that ica, and know much about the their information about present unused resources of the world. But they have to be given a what might be done about in- chance to help the nation, and only the President can call them of the world get to the White all back together.

Ford's First Installment

By Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON-There is w something incongruous—not to say irresponsible—in the complaints that President Ford's economic package only nibbles at the builet, or bites the maraismallow. For those bleating about the mild character of the program would have been utterly horrified if Mr. Ford had had the courage of his convictions. Moreover, the critics tend to view the administration proposals as a one-shot effort. In fact, abundant evidence suggests that it is more of a first installment with supplements almost sure to To be sure, the country is in acute economic distress. Economic activity which slipped very sharp-ly at the end of last year has been flat ever since. The President's chief forecaster, Alan Greenspan of the Council of Economic Advisers, sees no prospect for a pickup before the first or second quarter of next year.

That means a year and a half or more without economic growth. No matter what President Ford is pleased to say, that is, as Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board has acknowledged,

Food Costs

On the inflationary side, the 11 per cent annual rise registered in the consumer price figures is three or four times what is. tolerable. While the latest wholesale price numbers level off, the recent drop in expected corn and sorbean production promises another increase in food costs later on this year.

Big wage claims—especially in the coal negotiations which could lead to a strike next month—are in the offing. That will inevitably generate pressure for price increases since the big price gains of the past year have come in fuel and food, not industry as a whole

The International Revald Tribune welcomes letters from readers Short letters have a Nahed All letters are subject to condensation for space reasons Anonymous letters will not be considered for publica-tion Writers may request that their letters be signed only with initials but preference will be given to those fully signed and bearing the writer's complete address.

In these conditions, with the country on a delicate knife-edge etween recession and inflation, the one thing that wasn't wanted was a blockbuster program, mov-ing with bold assurance one way or another. In particular, it would have been disastrous if the President and his advisers had given free rein to their own instincts and prejudices. For Mr. Ford is a high priest of the old religion which calls for busing the budget and raising interest rates to meet the inflationary situation. It is to be counted a blessing that be pulled his punches in what is essentially a soft program. It is a fine thing that the high priest of the old religion showed some mercy, however small; to workers, taxpayers, consumers, homebuilders and others.

Less good is the character of the President's call for restraint on the excesses which push for-ward the inflation. He relies almost exclusively on voluntary messures to curtail food and fue consumption. He has said almost nothing about the need for business and labor to show restraint in asking wage and price in-

Undoubtedly the country was ready to rally round a clarion call for sacrifice. An unambignous message at this time would have been heeded. The cry-wolf discount is necessarily going to be applied to any second or third call which follows.

But that is not to say there won't be a second or third time around. On the contrary, the President's program demands a follow-through in many areas.

Mr. Ford intends to cut o. 1 imports by one million barrels a day. If the voluntary program he has adumbrated won't work he will be back-and he has said so-with tough mandatory propossis. Since the mandatory program would involve steps that could bust the economy—such as oil rationing or a gas tax or a limit on imports it is probably better to wait until the direction of the economy becomes more clear.

Logic

The same logic applies to the various programs designed to help those in trouble. Legislation for job and tax programs is required. Since the Congress is not going to act now, there will have to be a follow-on when the Con-gress returns. It seems likely that the climate after the elections would be better than the pre-electoral climate for such

Even in the matter of wage and price restraint, where the President's caution seems most difficult to justify, there is a case for delay. A coal settlement will certainly mean a big wage increase the more so as the coal operators, unlike most of industry, have it to give. So the strategic time to draw the line on wages and prices is after a settlement

On the whole in other words, strong case can be made for a cautious program. The real complaint, I think, goes to the White House disarray which allowed false expectations to be built in advance.

TOKYO, Oct. 11 (WP)-The board chairman of Japan's largest construction company and a re-tired Japanese ambassador to the United Nations today discussed their roles in a successful world-wide drive to win the Nobel Peace Priza for former Premier Eisakin

The campaign took 14 months; and involved publication of a special book to impress the jodges and active efforts by the Jepanese Foreign Ministry.

Nearly everybody in Japan and persons throughout the were: surprised at the choice of Mr. Sato as a co-recipient of the award, ammounced Tuesday, Former Irish Foreign Minister Sean MacBride was the other co-recipient. Among those who were not surprised were board chairman Morinosuke Kajima of the multibillion-dollar Kaima Corp and former UN Am-Toshikazu Kase

Mr. Kajims, who has been po-litically and personally close to Mr. Sato for many years, said work began in August of last year in the drive to secure the sward for the former Japanese premier. As chairman of the Ka-jima Institute of International Peace, the industrialist had tried cessfully in the past to obtain the peace award for another former Japanese premier and the wife of a premier. "We thought it was just about our time to get the prize." Mr. Kaitma said.

Mr. Sato's opposition to Japan cquiring nuclear arms was a major argument for awarding the peace prize to him.

Something of a Hawk Mr. Sato, who had closely backed U.S. foreign policy during the 1960s, had been considered something of a hawk in domestic terms and thus potentially offensive to China and the Soviet Union. In order to neutralize possible diplonatic critics, early in the drive Mr. Kajima obtained the backing of Premier Kakuei Tanaka, long a member of Mr. Sato's political faction, and the foreign minister the time, Masayoshi Ohira. ally explain them. Gen. Brown, an Air Force officer, acknowledged that at this point, at least, the Joint Chiefs were not planning any cuts in combat manpower for this year or next, or any shifts in strategy. He spoke at a news conference, his first since becoming chair-man in July.

Gen, Brown was questioned repeatedly about how the Pentagon will adjust to what it says is a loss of $14 billion in purchas-ing power this year alone, due mostly to inflation and a $2.6billion congressional cut. How-ever, Gen. Brown's replies to the questions were in sum, quite Privately, senior defense offi-cials say the key factor in measuring the iong-term impact will be the size of next year's budget, and possible supplemental hudget requests, and whether they will provide additional funds to offset the higher inflation rates.

Officials have said there un-doubtedly will be some procurement cuts and some personnel reductions this year no matter what happens. But the Pentagon can also stretch out many projects for a year if necessary and make rational reductions in nonstrategic areas. Thus, officials say, it will be difficult to make specific assessments as to whether the financial problems will force any dramatic shifts in policy until the dimensions of next year's hudget become clear.

President Ford has urged his enbinet officers to seek still further budget reductions to hold down federal spending. But Gen. Brown gave no indication that the Pentagon has been asked to make further cuts in its original $86-billion budget. Pentagon sources indicated that Mr. Schlesinger, who breakfasted with Mr. Ford yesterday, was not asked to make reductions beyond those already mandated by Con-

The general said he understood that there were considerations other than national security involved in allowing such a tour. but that "obviously, they learned a lot from that tour."

The tour touched off a considerable fuss within the Air Force when it was learned that the Russians were being shown mass-production techniques at Boeing, Lockheed and McDon-nell Douglas for new wide-bodied commercial airliners. These planes can also be used for troop and military cargo sirlifts, an area where the United States now holds a considerable lead over the Soviet Union.

PARIS, Oct. 11 (WP).—Libya, which in 1959 ordered 110 Mirage fighter-bombers, is negotiating for the latest generation of Marcel Dassault's combat planes, the French press reported today.

Between 30 and 50 F-1Y Mirages are believed involved in the nego-tiations, which have been under way for several weeks now that France has abandoned its controversial embargo on arms sales to the so-called 'battleground countries'—Israel, Jordan, Syria and Egypt. The embargo, first applied after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, was lifted when Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, in Angust, confirm-ed Israeli charges that the Mi-rages sold to Libya were actually on Egyptian soil. Their presence there was in violation of the sales

Major Crisis Seen in Spain; Anti-Communist Front Urged

MADRID, Oct. 11 (UPI).—Political moderates warned today that Spain, gripped by political tension and labor unrest, may be approaching a major crisis.

The warnings came as thousands of industrial workers were idled by illegal stoppages. Police have made hundreds of political arrests in recent weeks, but most of the persons detained have been released. One warning came from Tacito, a Christian-Democrat group associated with the Catholic Church It said that "confusion and anxiety are overflowing" and urged the government to tell the people where the nation is

In another warning of an uncertain future, the monarchist newspaper ABC, Spain's biggest, appealed to moderates to form a national alliance to prevent a "probable" Communist take-over when the 35-year reign of Generalissimo Francisco Franco comes to an end

Pressures Build Up

The two statements reflected the political pressures that have been building since the illness this summer of Gen Franco, 81. The pressures have been increased by an economic recession and by recent events in neigh-boring Portugal, where a 48-yearold rightist regime was toppled in an army coup that resulted in Communist participation in the ABC said in a full-page editorial that Spanish politicians, bankers, businessmen and churchmen have joined a "nation-wide ultra-opportunist run toward the

"Everybody rushes to cross to the other side It is now difficult to find Spanish politicians who do not profess they are leftists," ABC added.

Would it not be more logical and sensible if all these people who now try to pass themselves off as leftists realized that they belong to the right and are not ashamed of it, especially since half of free Europe votes the conservative ticket?

"Is there not a vital necessity in Spain to form a well-organized and firm, united right which can stop the pendulum from swinging all the way, with the probable result of a Communist dictatorship?".

Gen. Franco's illness sparked the birth of a cluster of underground "democratic juntas" and similar organizations grouping foes of the regime dedicated to bringing about its downfall. The present wave of strikes-illegal under Spanish law-has been organized than any in years, political sources

The strikes, some for wage increases but others purely political, according to the governmentcontrolled trade-union organization, have appeared to follow a rotating pattern involving different parts of the country.

A delegate at today's opening session called for "a grouping to-gether of all authentic democratic elements in Spain when Gen. Franco dies or retires.

A long-time party member said such a grouping would not in-clude the Spanish Communist party, or any party to the left of the Socialists, or to the right of Spain's fledgling Christian Democrat groups.

He said the consensus among delegates was that the party should refuse to cooperate with Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, who has been designated to take over from Gen. Franco and be-

Trud said that the production model differs from the prototype hy the addition of small stabilising wings, an improvement of the engine intakes and a reduction of the undercarriage.

'Caper' at the National Theatre

By John Walker

LONDON, Oct. 11 (IET) - While it is not quite on a par with Nero fiddling while Rome burned, the Royal Court Theatre, supposedly a socially committed organization, has marked this week of political confrontation and general election by presenting a nlay of quite stupelying banality and boredom, one which seems an evasion of

Its author, Ken Campbell, is noted for his "Roadshow," a sort of pub entertainment, full of deliberately bad acts that, provided the audience has the chance to drink while watching, can communicate a manic joy. His play, "The Great Caper"-as one of the characters says, "since it's all a choice of capers, choose the biggest and let The Great Caper

It is also offensive, particularly in a scene of simulated intercourse that ends the first act, with Katle Allan being handled as if she were no more than a lump of mest. What offends even more is the totally inert language of the play. However hard the actors flog away at their excessively long speechesrecounting insignificant moments in their lives in obsessive detail the words remain dead, lacking rhythm and sense.

Inspiration

Mr. Campbell would have us believe that his inspiration is the writing of Charles Fort, that man of wild talents, the historian of strange events who collated in-formation about a world that the title of your play"—is most of us would not recognize. most of us would not recognize.

Hiberately bad, although, despite ped behind a hedge and were the efforts of an energetic cast never seen again, where men and director, that is what it is. from nowhere, where frogs rained from the sky, and where farmers saw things that looked like white horses swimming in the air

It was, in short, our own world as recorded in odd stories in newspapers and scientific journals, stories that most people wonder at and then forget. While Mr. Fort recounted these phexplained phenomena with great wit and style, mounting a feroclously sustained attack on closed scientific minds, and building an alternative universe that was perfectly logical if bizarre in which this planet was stationary and the stars were openings in a revolving shell, Mr. Campbell does nothing with his material but hint at an interconnected universe and maintain that taking down one's trousers is a philosophic act.

He presents us with Eugene Grimley (Richard O'Callaghan), who is rescued from a trance-like condition by Ion (Warren Mitchell) and Stu (Ken Campbell), two students of the bizarre. Together, they set off in search of Eugene's perfect woman, Most of the time is passed by long introspective speeches from Eqgene and Ion, who takes off his trousers at one point to show that he has the hind quarters of a baboon. How this quest turned out I do not know, as I was finally driven from the theater by tibese deadening monologues. Mr. O'Callaghan monologues. Mr. O'Callaghan and Mr. Mitchell exert themselves mightily and Nicholas Wright directs with as much pace as possible, but they are defeated by the language. Mr.

Henze's 'Bassarids' Offers Rewards-But as Symphony

OPERA

By Henry Pleasants

LONDON, Oct. 11 (IHT).—The extravagant praise lavished by some critics on Hons Werner Hense's "The Bassarids" recalls Eduard Hanslick's reaction when Siegfried Wagner called "Hansel and Gretel" the most important opera since "Parsifal." "An ir-ritating pronouncement, said Hanslick, who hadn't liked it much, "and the worst of it is—

"The Bassarids," following its British premiere by the English National Opera at the Coliscum last night, with the composer as both producer and conductor, has been ranked by local critics with "Woszeck," "Die Frau Ohne Schatten" and "Turandot" among the opera masterpieces of this century. That, too, is probably reasonable if one accepts "masterpiece" as meaning simply the best of a pretty thin lot.

The secret of its superiority is, I suspect, that Henze has divert-ed his revolutionary predilections into political rather than musical theory, and chosen to articulate them in an essentially conservative musical language closer in idiom and syntax to Mahler and Strauss than to Schoenberg. If the often cruelly high tessitura he requires of the voices con-forms to modern fashion, and is damaging alike to textual intelligibility and vocal health, it is fashion set by Strauss. Like Strauss and Mahler, Henze is a master of the orchestra, and he more fastidious than either in its deployment. Given a libretto by W. H. Auden and Chester Kallman, drawn from Euripides's "The Bacchae," and concerned with the opposing ethics of Apollo and Dionysius, the sacrifice of intelligibility is probably just as well Opera is not a satisfactory forum for dialectical disputation, and least of all when the development of the argument is rendered both ambiguous and ambivalent by the droll fact that Auden saw Dionysius as the villain of the piece. while for Henze he is the hero.

Henre views "The Bassarids," even when as handsomely produced, sung and played as it is at the Coliseum, as essentially a symphony. Thus heard, it offers substantial rewards, although hardly in sufficient abundance satisfactorily to sustain two and a half hours without internals-

The Bassarids dates from 1968, when it was introduced at the Salzburg Festival Henze has written no opera since, and has no intention of writing one in the future. If we are to infer from this a conclusion that opera is simply not a 20th-century form, then Henze is to be applauded for more than just the several very effective episodes in "The Bassarids."

Arts Agenda

The Lyons Opera will open its season Oct. 15 with a new production, in French, of Leos Janacek's "Jenufa" in a staging by Ernst Poettgen and with sets and costumes by Jacques Rapp. Theodor Guschlbauer will conduct and the cast will be headed by Dany Barraud in the title part with Michèle Vilma as Kostel-nicka, Nicholas Di Virgilio as Lacs and Maurice Malevsky as Steva. Later performances will be Oct. 18, 19, 22, 23, 25, 27 and 30.

Under the title of "Die Sommerfrische, Giorgio Strehler will stage a one-evening vertion of Goldoni's "Trilogia della Villeggiatura," at the end of October, the first staging by the Italian director for Vienna's Burgtheater. The trio of full-length plays, related by plot and characters, was first produced in Strehler's one-evening version in 1954 at his own Piccolo Teatro of Milan, which at the time marked the revival of virtually forgotten pieces by Goldoni. The trilogy will be performed in the German translation by Piero Rismondo and with sets and costumes by Ezlo Frigerio. The preview performance is scheduled for Oct. 31.

Stravinsky's operas "The Night-ingale" and "Oedipus Rex" will enter the repertory of the Hessian State Theater in Darmstadt on Oct. 12 in productions by Harro Dicks and sets and costumes by Ruodi Barth and Use Trabing. Hans Drewanz will conduct The Nightingale" and Mathias Husmann "Oedipus Rex." The double-bill will be repeated on Oct.

A complete set of horse armor in German 16th-century style is no more than a late 19th-century Viennese copy, Indeed, the catalogue points out that it was probably made by Winckelmeyer, a craftsman who worked in Vienna before 1900. #### Doubts Arise

But when it comes to such pieces as a fine English battle helmet, datable to the mid-16th century, doubts begin; The cata-logue points out that it was part of the collection of the Earls of Pembroke. What it doesn't say is that the Ear!; of Pembroke had the last private English armory which had been preserved for centuries until it was sold before World War 1. One could argue that this is a piece to which his-torical significance is attached

That is even truer of the 14thcentury sword with a straight blade, 94 centimeters long, which was excavated from Pembridge Castle, The sword was sold at an auction of Pembridge Castle property in November, 1956, and sequired by the Tower of London, It is not a great work of art and its condition is poor. But the number of pieces from properly recorded sites is limited. Is the £300 to £400 it is likely to fetch worth the loss to the nation? One feels doubts about other pieces, which though of little intrinsic merit, might have historical value such as the English standard-issue arms from the London to be held Tuesday at 18th century on It must be remembered that the Tower is not just a monument, part of which dates to the Norman period, but was the national arsenal for centuries. A lot of pieces that one might regard as ordinary have been there since they were made, and all may be considered as part of a whole, a whole of inestimable value

Claude Blair, keeper of the metalwork department of the Victoria and Albert Museum and an authority on English arms and armor, points out that the Tower became a showplace as early as the 16th century. After the civil war, what remained of the royal arms and armor was brought to the Tower, and when Charles II was restored to the throne in 1660, a "line of kings," a fanciful set of figures in full armor on horseback, was set up.

Samuel Meyrick, an antiquary who wrote the first serious books on the armory of the Tower, did away with what Blair calls the sillier figures. The Tower then started making purchases to fill in gaps, and a new building in neo-Gothic style was built against the white Tower to house the collections. The first curator of the armories was appointed in the late 19th century.

However, that did not yet exclude the purely functional use of the Tower, which was under the jurisdiction of the War Office until 1915. Firearms were then still stored in the Tower. In this way, it can be regarded as a unique institution an arsenal and a military museum combined in one for 400 years; as such the institution is a monument lock, stock and barrel

Mint Condition

Should it part with some of its pieces, say, for example, sell one or two of the several hundred late 18th-century pistols in mint condition that it stores? To this question an affirmative answer

The Art Market the decision was taken to sell duplicates. This, Blair says, was justified. The Tower has an inadequate purchase grant, and if It is to fill in the gaps in its collec-

> Blair mentions another case of Williams, who had a large collection of arms and armor and an even larger and more important library, died, I'is executors took advantage of the law that allows the ceding of works of art to national museums in the settlement of death duties. The Tower bought the lot, took out what they wanted and sent the rest to the rolesroom: A good deal of what is to be laid on the block Tuesday comes from the Williams collec-

> However, when pressed, Blair concedes that even that sort of sale does not make him very happy: "They are setting up an unfortunate precedent... be-cause there is a limit to what the Tower can sell. The Treasury might not grasp this and someone may one day want to pressure the Tower into selling some pistols or helmet just because they won't be able to see the difference be-

Part of Saddle

One may cartainly wonder whether the sale of part of a saddle steel—or to use the ac-curate technical jargon: "the right-hand boy and cantle plates" -from a Milanese saddle of the third quarter of the 18th century is necessary. The fantastic quality of the embossed battle scene makes it a marvelous work of art even to someone who is not interested in armory as such, Blair admits there are very few pieces of this type in the open marketor even in museums excepting the huge collections in Vienna and Dresden. The Victoria and Albert has nothing of the kindonly a fragmentary piece which is, nevertheless, one of its most prized possessions, Among the few comparable pieces, illustrated in works accessible to the general public, is another saddle steel in Waddesdon Manor in the James A de Rothschild collection, of which the catalogue raisonne, written by Blair, has just been published by the Office du Livre, Fribourg, Switzerland, under the auspices of the National Trust. Even that, however, is not directly comparable, for it was made by a French craftsman of the Ecole de Fontainebleau. The main argument that could justify the sale is its condition: The steel has been cleaned with acid, a considerable drawback by collectors' standards. But how many other pieces are available?

Not because Bolotowsky paints in the social realist idiom that is generally regarded as that time's prevalent style—even as sentimental genre is regarded as the style of the mid-19th centurybut precisely because he does not.

The fact is that Bolotowsky was painting cool geometrical abstractions even before the mid-30s, and that he wasn't alone at all. An authentic Peruvian munmy, scrunched up in the fetal position, sits on the saddle of a real motorcycle that has undergone a furry sea-change after a prolonged stay in the port of Marselles. An assemblage by Louis Pons Pons has regularly used desiccated animals-rate and cats, for in-stance-in his works, and still does, but this, to my knowledge is the first instance of human remains being used in this way outside the catacombs. My initial encounter with the mummy occurred several years ago when I visited the artist's studio. It sat there, gray-skinned and impres-sive—awesome, in fact. In the gellery, involuntarily clowning on the motorcycle, the dead Peruvian looked like an old acquaintance caught in a rather foolish situation. Visitors glanced at him and walked by as though his presence were really quite unremark-able. In Pone's assemblages it is not easy to discern where the ironic duel ends and where a trashman's hymn to Almighty Death begins.

Petrodollar Recycling Hit By EEC Aide

Says Only Solution Is to Reduce Oil Use

BRUSSELS, Oct. 11 (AP-DJ) The Common Market's monetary and economics commissioner, Wil-helm Haferkamp, strongly implied today that the recycling of petrodollars will not solve oil consumer countries' payments problems in the medium or long term.

"In the long run, you cannot fill the holes in payments balances by increasing indebtedness," Mr. Haferkamp told the West German chambers of industry and commerce at a meeting in West

Mr. Haferkamp's view agrees with that of U.S. Federal Reserve Board chairman Arthur Burns, who said yesterday that petrodollar recycling really means "escaping reality" and "piling debt on top of debt."

Mr. Burns said all nations must cut down the use of oil to put pressure on world oil prices. For EEC countries, Mr. Hafer-kemp said, the long-term task is to save energy, develop domestic sources of energy and balance higher oil and raw material costs through more exports. "This means we have to produce more, invest more and consuma less than would be normally necessary," he said.

He noted that the commission has worked out plans to reduce the external share in the EEC's total energy supplies to 40 per cent by 1985 from the current 65 per cent.

The ambitions plan requires great research efforts for new energy sources, risky projects for developing such sources and costly investment in nuclear power plants, Mr. Haferkamp

Serious Threat Is Seen As U.S. Debts Increase

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (AP).—The total debt of every segment of American society has swelled to $2,500 billion and poses a serious threat to the nation's economy in this inflationary period, Business Week magazine says in its latest edition. "Never has the debt economy seemed more vulnerable, with a distressing number of borrowers and lenders in precarious Shape," the marazine said.

Since the close of World War II, the nation has borrowed an average net of $200 million a day, the magazine said. Now the debt is so huge that it would take more than one-third the gross national product of Japan, the world's second-largest capitalist economy, just to pay this year's interest on the American debt, the magazine said.

Of the total debt, $1,000 billion is in corporate debt, $600 billion in mortgage debt, $500 billion in U.S. government debt, $200 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt, and $300 billion in state and local government debt and local governme lion in consumer debt.

Business Week said the debt "is an ominously heavy burden with the world as it is today—ravaged by inflation, threatened with economic depression, torn apart by the massive redistribution of wealth that has accompanied the soaring price of oil." The magazine said the consensus among economists is that the economy is still not overborrowed but the breaking point is

The magazine said corporations had tripled their debt in the past 15 years, and consumer debt had soured 50 per cent in the past three years.

In a separate article, the magazine says that a survey of 550 major nonfinancial corporations found that 23 per cent, or 114, of the companies as of last June "had amassed more total debt . . . than they carried in equity." "Despite record corporate earnings, just covering the interest on this mountain of fixed obligations is rapidly becoming a major corporate headache and a disturbing threat to the very survival of many," the magazine says.

Mr. Burns conceded that no central bank anywhere "ever came close" to the Fed's massive rescue operation for Franklin.

Under persistent questioning by Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., who wanted to know "if Uncle Sam is going to get his $1.75 billion back," Mr. Burns firmly defended the loans.

"You must ask what kind of a world we would have had if the Franklin Bank would bave been allowed to fail." he told Rep. Reuss. 'There would have been other failures and high costs-a deterioration of (investment)

Bank Rate Cuts Lift Stock Prices

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (IHT).-Prices scored the third consecutive day of gains in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange today.

The Dow Jones industrial averoge rose 10.09 points to 658.17. It had been down more than six points earlier in the day when profit-taking was under way. The Dow index rose a total of 45.45 points in the previous two days of the rally. Volume totaled 20.09 million shares, compared to 26.36 million yesterday. Advancing issues outnumbered declines 1,063 to 422. Brokers said traders were encouraged by more cuts in bank prime rates today.

First National City Bank, the n a tion's second-largest com-mercial bank, announced a reduc-

Wall Street Experts Mystified By Sudden Rally in Stocks

By Michael C. Jensen

NEW YORK, Oct. 11 (NYT).- on Aug. 16, 1971, when 31.73 mil-The mood on Wall Street, which has been shrouded in gloom in recent months, ranged from jubilant to bewildered yesterday as stock prices surged upward for the second consecutive day, completing one of the largest twoday advances in the history of the New York Stock Exchange.

Orders flooded into brokerage offices and then onto the floor of the exchange, which experienced the fifth busiest day in its 182-year history.

"I'd say the mood on Wall Street is one of bemused bafflement," said Robert Stowall, a vice-president of the brokerage house of Reynolds Securities Inc. He and other Wall Street officials said they perceived few reasons for the sudden and sharp turnaround, though many mentioned a gradual easing of interest rates as the most important single factor.

Yesterday's volum on the New York Stock Exchange was 26.36 million shares, the highest since 27 million shares were traded. The all-time volume record was set lion shares were traded.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 17.06 points, closing at 648.08. The two-day rise totaled 45.45 points. The largest two-day advance in the exchange's history occurred on May 27 and 28, 1970, when the Dow rose 52.99 points in what analysis described as a technical Scarcely anyone on Wall Street felt the rally was a result of the economic program that President Ford appounced on Tuesday.

"This rally is more related to the prospect for lower short-term interest rates than to any other development," said Robert Far-rell, vice-president and manager of market analysis for Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, the pation's largest securities

Mr. Farrell said the public apparently had been returning to the market in large numbers in recent days and that the last 10 days had seen the largest volume of net odd-lot buving-that is, purchases of fewer than 100 shares-since 1970.

The issue is so politically sensitive that past complaints by the Chamber of Commerce against the codetermination law have been denounced by both government and party leaders as an interference in domestic affairs.

The Chamber of Commerce has replied that American firms, engaged in everything from automobile manufacturing to food processing, have invested between $10 billion and $13 billion in West Germany. This represents approximately 45 per cent of all foreign investment in this coun-

Last spring the chamber engaged Wilhelm Wengler, a promment law professor at the Free University of Berlin, to analyze the legality of the bill. His rewhich was completed in August, has not been made public but is known to support the chamber's contention that the proposed law contravenes the provisions of the 1954 treaty.

Value Line looks at

"BIG BOARD" STOCKS AT P/E's UNDE

with RECORD EARNINGS forecast in 1974

In today's deeply depressed stock market, scores of stocks are selling at earnings multiples which would have been hard to believe a few years ago.

But many of these "low" P/E stocks have weak earnings, or are relatively obscure, and therefore offer little attraction to serious investors who now want to line up their "re-entry" strategy for a major bull market.

However, The Value Line Investment Survey also reveals a number of well-known issues, listed on the New York Stock Exchange, which are selling way below their P/E "norms" yet, according to our estimates, have record-high earnings in sight or 1974. Here is just a sampling Ampco-Pittsburgh Corp. Clark Oil Continental Copper Colt Industries Cyclops Corp.

Leesona Corp. Occidental Petroleum Reynolds Metals Tesoro Petroleum Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel

Each of these stocks is selling at less than 3 times its estimated 1974 earnings. The average price of these stocks works out to be about $15, against average 1974 estimated earnings of nearly $6.70 per share—for an average P/E of 2.3 (Value Line Survey Oct. 4, 1974).

Each of these stocks, according to Value Line estimates, is expected to achieve all-time record earnings in 1974. On average, we expect this year's per share earnings to be some 85% higher than in the best previous earnings year of each of the stocks. Each of these companies has sizeable sales. The 1973 sales of the smallest exceeded $90 million. The average sales of all ten last year were well over half a billion dollars.

IMPORTANT WARNING

Investors who believe that major market recovery is not far off, and are eager not to miss out on unusual "bargains," may be tempted to rush into stocks like these without further examination. We urge you not to do so. The list above is presented NOT as a suggested course of investment action but rather to illustrate the unusual condition of the market.

You need a lot more than isolated bits of information. intricuing as such evidence may appear. Indeed, we believe you should not seriously consider any stock (including those above) until you have checked the latest weekly Value Line Survey as to the stock's

- a) Rank for relative Probable Market Performance in the next 12 months—The ranks range from 1 (Highest) to 5 (Lowest); relative to more than 1500 other stocks under continuing review. (While not every stock will always act in accordance with its Value Line Performance rating, such a large majority have in the past for reasons that are logical that we believe you can weigh the odds heavily in your favor by taking these ratings into account before reaching your decision).
- b) Rank for relative investment Safety (1 down to 5):
- c) Estimated Yield in the next 12 months;
- d) Estimated Appreciation Potentiality in the next 3 to 5 years.

UPDATED EVERY WEEK

Every week, the Value Line Survey updates these key ranks and estimates—for EACH of more than 1500 stocks under continuous review—and presents, for each, its latest P/E, earnings and dividend data.

In addition, each of the more than 1500 stocks is the subject of a comprehensive new full-page report at least once every three months-including 23 series of vital financial and operating statistics going back 10 years and estimated 3 to 5 years in the

Whatever it is you are looking for in stocks, Value Line gives you more data and measurements with which to make informed judgments-on each of more than 1500 stocks-than any other investment source we know of. And it's organized for quick and easy reference. (With the latest weekly Value Line Survey.

for instance, it would take you just minutes to check which stocks have current P/Es below 2 or 3 or 4 or 5.)

GET READY NOW

Today's market, in our judgment, is more deeply underval-ued than at any time since 1949. The unweighted Value Line Composite Average of more than 1500 stocks recently was more than 45% below its 1961 starting point.

Once a major market rise does get under way, it is likely to move with considerable speed in its earliest stage. Now, we believe, is the time to get ready, with deliberation, so that you won't have to rush in indiscriminately later on. No one really knows where the precise bottom will be or when. But we are sure that barring war or revolution, stocks cannot be far from rock bottom now. To help you prepare for maximum advantage, we invite you to accept the following special offer:

SURVIVING THE LONG NIGHT

By Sir Geoffrey Jackson. 226 pp. Illustrated. Vanguard Press. $7.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

AFTER he had been violently and thread and writing and repistol-whipped by the Tupamaros guarrillas who were kidnapping him and sat dazed and half-conscious in his own commandeered car, Sir Geoffrey Jackson's first thought was that his wife could count on a widow's pension and that his son was a fully grown man who could manage without him.

Next, he feit a profound regret for "time wasted," then a feeling of gratitude for all the good things his life had held. This sequence shows us pretty clearly what kind of man he is. He was also the British ambassador to Uruguay, a country that in 1971 was coming apart at the seams politically and economically. His captors were members of "revolutionary" organization that had just brutally murdered an American official Without knowing why he had been kidnapped. Sir Geoffrey made up his mind that, whatever happened, he would hang on to his dignity, as a man and as his country's ambassador. It was all he felt he could do, under the circumstances. He was placed in a damp tiny subterranean cage and interrogated by booded figures, who asked him if he owned a castle and accused him of being a "neocolonial capitalist" because he admitted to playing golf. Sens-ing that his most immediate danger was not the threat of violence but of a systematic disorientation already being practiced on him, Sir Geoffrey set himself the task of staying sound in mind and body until his fate had been decided. "Surviving the Long Night" is his record of how he kept himself from becoming demoralized or from going crazy while living for eight months in a cell no bigger than a modest-sized bathroom.

A reasonably healthy man of 55, he exercised his body as well as he could in that confined space and began to devise ways to occupy his even more vigorous mind. Since his guards had orders not to engage in unnecessary talk with him, he invented "patterned" tasks to structure his day, even going so far as to devise three entirely original forms of patience, or solitaire, becoming an expert with needle

Moscow Publishes Neruda Prose Work

MOSCOW, Oct. 11 (AP),-The Soviet Union has published the first book of prose by Chilean Nobel Prize-winning poet Pablo

Neroda, according to Tass. The work, entitled "About Poetry and About Life," is part autobiographical and part an anthology of Neruda's prose dating from 1931 to 1971, the year be won the Nobel Prize for Literature, the Soviet news agency said. Neruda, a Chilean Communist party member, is widely read here: He died in September, trying to brainwash him by shotting off all evidence of the external world, they eventually allowed him a small selection of books and music. The books, at first, were "revolutionary" propaganda, to which he responded as one might expect He was no happier with "protest music" and shrewdly remarks in "Surviving the Long Night" that almost all the contemporary music and reading matter of young "revolutionaries" is melancholy. Pondering the violence he and others had suffered at the organization's hands, he makes a next distinction between violence and force. As he sees it, violence is force without morality or responsibility.

His comments oo his captors have a "shock of recognition" quality. They can be amiable, ha says, but they are not sentimental. To kill him would be, to them, simply a pragmatic act in which the end justifies the means. They are almost schizo-phrenic, as he phrases it, in their ability to separate their humanity and their absolutely impenetrable dedication to a home-grown perversion of Marxist-Leninist principles. In one of his most telling passages, Sir Geoffrey points out that these young peo-ple have no interest "beyond the apocalypse," no realistic plan for a future farther than that,

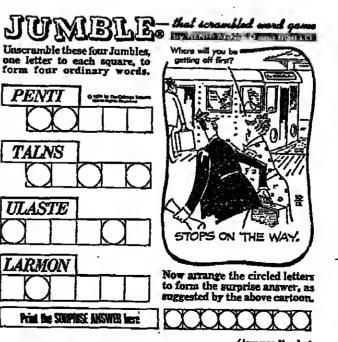

In two interviews by journalists sympathetic to the Tupemeros, the author bolds his own without much trouble. He may be better as an ambassador, though, than as a literary critic, for on being allowed to read Cervantes's "Don Quixote," he finds in it "an in-difference if not callousness oscillating between passive fatalism and active criefty." When he adds that he "never much cared for the allegorical aspect of Mann's depiction of the hothouse of a pre-World War I tuberculosis sanitarium." one feels that perhaps his principles, too, are cramping his world view, or at least his sense of irony.

While there is no shortage of style or irony in contemporary writing, we can never have too much of the kind of sanity and humanity that Sir Geoffrey possesses to a prodigious degree.

World Series Teams Evenly Matched

stay ahead in a close race in September. The A's, winning their division For two reasons, careful analysis of the teams is not likely to prove enlightening about the outcome of the 1974 World Series, title for the fourth straight year and the first under their new manager, Alvin Dark, played far below their capacity at least half defending champions, against the Los Angeles Dodgers in baseball's

So where Dodger statistics are superior, they reflect a difference in necessary productivity rather than ability.

But since pitching is the most important element of any base-ball game, and especially a short series, even intuitive analysis must start there.

In other respects, these are two evenly matched teams. Both have set lineups, good defense, well-distributed batting power and plenty of basepath speed. Each is capable of scoring runs in a bunch, and each is more likely to manufacture a needed run or two late in a game. The Oakland infield is more brilliant at second and short, and its outfield would be clearly superior if Reggie Jackson had a sound leg.

In pitching, a major advantage that Oakland would have has been drastically reduced by the dictates of the television schedule, which provides for off-days after the second and fifth games, where none would be needed just for travel.

The A's have three proven topdrawer starters: Ken Holtzman, Vida Blue and Hunter, who will work in that order. If the series goes six games, they'll work again, and Holtzman would be able to start the seventh game.

Turning to Ran

The Dodgers have only two with comparable credentials: Andy Messersmith and Don Sutton, who will start the first two games. Then they must turn to Doug Rau, a recently unsuccessful newcomer, or Al Downing, the seldomused veteran who is capable of surprising everyone,

In the bullpens, the A's als have more numbers—with Darold Knowles and Paul Lindblad back ing up Rollie Fingers. But Mike Marshall's special talent for every-day work balances that out to a degree. (Where the A's will be better off, perhaps, is in a highscoring game that requires several pitchers on each side.)

So if the seven games were played on seven consecutive days, as they would be if pure baseball competition were the only consideration, the A's would have a distinct edge. They could start front-liners in six of the seven games; the Dodgers in only four. That way, they still have an advantage with seven top starters to five, but that five gives the Dodgers some leeway, especially if one of the A'a starters has a

Team Ability

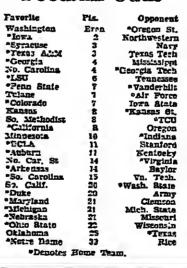

Essentially, though, it shapes np as an evenly-matched series in terms of team ability. These two can claim, legitimately, to be the two best teams in baseball, and the winner will be accepted as a true champion.

Messersmith, a 20-game winner who is a former California Angel, eaid, "The A'e have a helluva club. I know them. I've pitched against all of them except that new guy, [Clandell] Washington. It was a big thing to beat the Pirates, but now it's the World Series and that's what it's all about. I'm glad I get to start it.

Conversely, Oakland's openinggame pitcher is an ex-National Leaguer. Holtzman won 19 games for the A's this year. He formerly pitched for the Chicago

"Everyone says we're a better team than Oakland," said Dodgers' outfielder Bill Buckner. "When Holtzman was pitching for the Cubs, we usually did well against him."

One Little Candle For Alvin Dark as Manager of Year

By George Minot ir.

OAKLAND, Calif., Oct. 11 (WP) -- Here's a tentative, hesitant vote for Alvin Dark as manager of the year in the American League. It will probably be the only one he will

For various reasons, the league's two secondplace finishers, Billy Martin of Texes and Bill Virdon of New York, will get most of the sup-port and the devil take the front-running Oakland A's field boss. Martin and Virdon will prove stronger at the polls than Baltimore's Earl Weaver, the incumbent manager of the year and a worthy candidate to repeat.

Not to take anything from Martin, Virdon and even Weaver, this should be Dark's year. True, Mertin helped lift the Texas Rangers from last in the West in 1973 to the runnerup position behind the A's. When given the job at the tail end of last season, he inherited some of the finest young talent in any organization. Baseball people have been saying for some time that the franchise, having had so many high draft picks after years of last-place finishes in Washington and Texas, was ready to start playing well.

And the schedule favored Texas this season, players on other clubs have said. The Rangers had so many off-days in the spring they were able to make do with two starters. They were good ones-Ferguson Jenkins and

Collapse in West

But the big reason for the Rangers' climb to second was the collapse in the West of Kansas City and Chicago. Considering their great expectations, the Royals and the White Sox were the flops of the baseball year.

Then there's Virdon. The New York press has made much of the fact that Virdon was the second choice of the Yankees, after Dick Williams. And that the team was playing in a borrowed ball park, Shea Stadium.

Well, Virdon may have been second choice but he did have managerial experience (with Pittsburgh), and the Yankee players-who lack power-are more suited to Shea than to Yankee Stadium.

Moreover, the Yanks were not that bad last year. They were in the thick of the race until Baltimore put on one of its typical late rushes and until Sparky Lyle was used by then-manager Ralph Houk to the point of exhaustion.

Virdon did better by Lyle and he was the beneficiary of the magnificent moves of club president Gabe Paul, who presented him with Sandy Alomar, Jim Mason and Rudy May, among others.

Like Martin in the West, Virdon probably would not even be considered if it were not for the collapse of the opposition. In the AL East, it was the swoon of Boston. That also led to the rise of Weaver and the Orioles. It is difficult to vote against that combina-tion after the way they finished, but Weaver will undoubtedly lose votes from those who will ask: "How come the Orioles, those wonderful old pros. had not clinched the division by Labor Day?"

There is really no answer, and that brings us to the case for Alvin Dark.

As was Virdon, Dark was the second and perhaps third choice. Team owner Charles Finley would have preferred that Dick Williams stay on and, according to reports last fall, Finley tried to hire Ted Williams to manage his malcontents.

To no one's surprise, least of all his own, Dark found himself caught between the sport's most demanding, bard-headed owner and the sport's most free-wheeling, most outspoken group of players:

Finley chewed him out when he failed to pull away from the division at the start. His players were nipping at him all the way.

"He couldn't manage a meat market," one of his players said. Pitchers like Ken Holtz-man and Vida Blne would grumble almost every time they were relieved. Dark does have a quick hook. There were the usual player fights (Reggie Jackson vs. Bill North, etc.) which have be-come eo much a part of the A's, but Dark smoothed them over and found the right combinations when such key players as Jackson and Campy Campaneris were injured.

Sal Bando, the team captain who, some think, has managerial aspirations, almost gave Dark his first compliment of the year. "He has mellowed since [he managed at] Kansas City," Bando said. "Supposedly it's because of his belief in God. I believe in God and I still yell at my wife." Perhaps the A's don't need a manager. In any event, anybody who manages the A's and doesn't yell at his wife should be manager of

Superman Flies Again

Henry Kissinger has been portrayed in magazines and books as Superman. Whenever there was trouble in the world. Henry would dash into a phone booth near the White House, change into his blue body stock- . ing costume and fly off to settle the matter. It cama as a shock the other day to hear Henry admit be was no looger Superman. I was passing the phone booth and I saw Henry Buchwald inside. "Good," I said to myself, "Henry's going to settle the oil crisis." I waited to see him fly out of the booth on his mission, but he just remained there.

"Henry," I finally said anxiously, "why haven't you changed into your costume?"

"I'm not going to be Super-man any more," Henry said. "I'm sick and tired of working miracles."

"But, Henry, if you won't be Superman, what will we all do?" That's not my problem. Being Superman means you have to travel B lot. I want to spend more time with Nancy."

"I can appreciate that." I told him, "but you have an image to uphold. The media made what you are today. You just can't go into a phone booth and say you're not coming out." Why should I come out?" Henry replied, "The House is picking oo me: the Senate is picking on me; the press is picking on me. You know Supermen hava feelings, too."

"You can't pay attentioo to

AMERICA CALLING

WASHINGTON—For some time criticism, Henry. If everyone now, Secretary of State loved you, you wouldn't ha doing your job."

"Everyone used to love me," he said.

"Yes, but that's hecause they didn't like Nixon. You always looked so much better compared to him. Once he resigned, you were more or less on your own, and some people decided they loved you and some people decided they didn't."

"I think Superman should be loved hy everybody." Henry said. "I doo't mind criticism, if it's fair. What I don't like is unfair criticism.

"Nobody likes unfair criticism," I told him.

"I'm the first one to admit," he added, "that I'm oot perfect, What I don't like is other people telling me I'm not perfect."

"Nobody likes to be told they're not perfect, Henry. The thing to do is to rise above it and prove they'rs wrong. Now get into that silly costume and fly off to the Middle East and straighten out our problems."

"I'm not going to do it unless I have assurance that people will stop picking on me."

"You have my word. Henry. I'll make sure that there is not one line in the newspapers questioning any of your past actions." Henry started taking off his nants.

"Okay." he said, "Tll do it one more time. But if I hear any squawks from anybody about what I did, it's the last time I go into this phone booth." I held his pants while he took off his shirt.

"I don't know if I ever told you this, Henry," I said, "but you have lovely legs." "Don't try to change the subject," he said as he took off his shoes and socks. This is everybody's last chance. If they doo't like what I'm doing, let them get aoother Superman."

"They'll like it, Henry," I assured him. "They'll like it." And so last Tuesday as people looked up into the sky they saw a weird object. One person said 'It's a hird.' Another person said. "It's a plane." And then everyone cried out at once "No, it's Kissinger!" And we all slept better that night.

Bertolucci's Chronicle of His Country and Childhood

DARMA, Italy (IHT).-Generations die and are born: the years stretch from 1900 to 1945 with an epilogue, as yet unwritten, set in our near future. The setting is the northern Italian province of Emilia, rich in farmland, once rich in trade, rich in strife from the Guelfs and Ghibellines, the Communists and rightists of today. The camera has begun with long, languorous tracking shots of fields ripening in the summer sun. "The rhythm of the film is the changing seasons," says its director, Bernardo Bertolucci,

From the stifling torments of "Last Tango in Paris" Bertolucal has moved to a film, "1900," that is in every way expansive: a long chronicle with a large multi-national cast filming in English, the largest budget any Italian film has ever had, distribution by three major U.S. film companies which have carved on the world among them, and a shooting schedule of six generous months.

Six months," says Bertolucci, "isn't long enough. I wanted a year because of the unity of a day, 2 year, a century," The words are not arrogant, they simply suggest a sure vision of how things should be, a vision Bertolucci has had since he made a film with a 16mm camera at the age of 15. "Even then I thought of it as my first film, I had no doubt that this was what I was going to do."

Later, as a much-praised young poet, Bertolucci dreamed of film: "I wrote poems because they were the closest thing to the cinema," he says. His films have a poetic precision and floency and were deeply and quietly admired well before "Last Tango in Paris" exploded

Acquaintances say he hasn't changed. "He's just as he was, only more so." says Dominique Sanda, who was in "The Conformist" and is in "1900." He is burly, handsome, cunning and bright-eyed. Now that he has become B closely-watched celebrity he is perhaps a bit more wary: he used to direct in an ancient black velour hat given him hy an uncle but the hat is gone now, replaced by various temporary examples of the milliner's art. "I don't like fetishes"

Like many artists who find themselves early, Bertolocci, 34, is in a sense always making the same film. "1900" has elements of the Fascist theme of "The Spider's Stratagem" and "The Conformist" and of the young man's division between Marxism and his bourgeois upbringing in "Before the Revolution." Again, he has centered his film in the region around Parma, where he lived very happily until he was sent-catapulted, he says-to Rome for higher studies at the age of 11. Parms is B handsome, solid city with fine monumen splendid food, and the toughest opera audience in the world. Bertolucci's father founded the local film club.

Bertolocci says he had a golden childhood, a big, comfortable house and understanding parents. The Po river was his Nile, his Mississippi. "It is a presence," he says. "What happens in this film on the Po could happen in 'Aida' or Intruder in the Dust'," He smiles at the conceit. "1900," he says, "is a film of my country, of my childhood, my friends' childhoods, the childhoods of my father and

The shooting on this day, some 20 minotes' drive out of Parma, past fields of corn and clover, beehives, apple trees, vineyards and low-stung, aturdy farmhouses, is centered on a fine ancient farm compound with deep red walls and a surprising blue-columned portico. There are threshing machines and a batch of swill for today's scene in which Donald Sutherland and Laura Betti get rooghed up in a

Despite the cameras and make-op men and the dolly that bears a California license plate and dates from "Ben Hur," the mood is atrangely bucolic. It's hard to tell the actors from the farmhands. "It's not just for local color," Bertolucci says. "I like to mix real people and actors. Real people help actors be more authentic and actors help real people to lose their excesses."

In addition to Sanda, Betti and Sutherland, the cast includes Burt Lancaster, Romolo Valli, Robert de Niro, Sterling Hayden, Gérard Depardieu, Stefania Sandrelli, Alida Valli and 86-year-old actress Francesca Bertini, whom Bertolucci lured out of a 50-year retirement to play Lancaster's sister-"his younger sister," as she made clear to the film's unit publicist.

"She was beautiful in 1912, she is like a revenant, a ghost of films past," Bertolucci says. It is the lunch break and Bertolucci talks and eats in a room of the farmhouse, with a big kitchen table piled high with ham and pasts and country bread and wine juga.

On the dresser, an old clock ticks placidly sway.

Bertolucci and his brother, Giuseppe, and his editor, Franco Arcalli, began working on the script of "1900" during "Last Tango." He has always used a script merely as a guide, preferring to improvise, and says he will do so on "1900" despite the complexity of Bertolucci likes his characters to become the actors, not the actors to become the characters, and so each role is determined by who plays it (how different "Last Tango" would have been if played, as originally intended, by Dominique Sanda and Jean-Louis Trinti-gnanti. Today, Miss Sandrelli has just appeared to replace Maria Schneider and so Bertolucci will completely re-write the part. "I am delighted," he says.

"What I want from an actor is to be fascinated beyond anything having to do with the character he plays. I try to excite them into being themselves, because they don't want to be themselves."

His methods can be unsettling. The ebullient Italian character actress Leura Betti says, "It's difficult to know what he's really doing. He makes it all seem simple but you know it isn't. It makes Dominique Sanda, on the other hand, is not disturbed by apparent simplicity: "Simple stories are the hest, simple explanations are the best. I am not that uncomfortable with simplicity.

With Bertolucci, nothing is fixed, he changes all the time. It's not uncomfortable, it's magic. Even the camera seems to breathe," Bertolucci, leaning back in his farmhouse chair, says he completely revised "1900" when it came time to start shooting:

"When I came here, I thought I was doing a film on the death of B culture, of peasant life. I thought of this film as B sort of danse funebre. But now it's all changed—the peasants are very much alive. I am astonished by how, through politics, Communism, they saved their archaic vision of the world. Through a revolution, they have preserved.

"And so," he adds, "the film has changed because I film reality." And yet, perhaps because it is October, there is a slightly elegiac, autumnal mood in the air. It is Bertolucci's mood.

"I don't think there's much vitality in the cinema now," he says rather suddenly. "I am making this film with the love one might feel for an old, dying person. You try to make him happy in his last moments. I don't think the cinema has much future. We live in a world of appearances and so the cinema of recent years is a cinema of appearances."

The farmhouse clock ticks, "That is a nice sound," says Bertolucci. A last question in the silence: If the cinema is dying, what "A long shot, with no cut," Bertolucci says. "Life."
